A garden will be created on the south façade of St James's Palace

SEE IT: SUMMER'S ROYAL GARDEN PARTY Come to an eco-conscious party hosted by the Prince of Wales, who is opening his private gardens at Clarence House, as well as at neighbouring Lancaster House and Marlborough House, for A Garden Party to Make a Difference.

The event, running from September 8 to 19, is part of the prince's Start initiative and will feature exhibits that display a sustainable future, as well as appearances, debates and comedy from Jools Holland, Sir David Frost, Alan Titchmarsh and Antony Worrall Thompson. The landscape team of Tom Petherick, Lulu Urquhart and Adam Hunt are creating a Future Cities Garden on the south façade of St James's Palace for the garden party, showing that quality and quantity can be achieved from the smallest growing space.

Tickets cost £15, £7.50 for children (see startgardenparty.co.uk) but we have 10 pairs to give away. The winners will also have the opportunity of chatting to the designers about the Future Cities Garden. To enter, visit homesandproperty.co.uk/outdoors by midnight August 25.

Take a tip from HRH Prince of Wales and make a garden feature of birdhouses
